The despondent man inherited his money from his aunt. Mary Egfe, better known as Dutch Mary, the proprietress of the once famous "Dutch Corall," jointly with his wife on condition that they should marry.

The statement having been published that the Government of the Southern Confederacy had meditated a union of the church and State, Jefferson Davis has church and State, Jefferson Davis has written to Rev. William Jones, secretary of the Southern Historical Association, in which the writer says: "The story referred to is not only untrue, but absurd. The Constitution of the Confederate States differed from that of the United States by having in its preamble a recognition of the Supreme Being, and invoking the favor and guidance of Almighty God, and in section 9 of the first article, it said: 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.' "The different denominations to which the members of the Cabinet belonged is also cited to show the absurdity of the story.
